THE SPEECH.

Well, now that you have heard the governor's views of the situation in Wisconsin, have read the speech delivered last evening at the Methodist church, what is your individual opinion of what shall be done to better conditions in the future?

It is up to the voters and taxpayers of the state to exert their influence at the polls the coming primary, yet months away, and later at the polls. The start has been made to redeem the state. Will it be continued?

Governor Philipp gave a clear-cut and concise explanation of the entire situation and in such language that it can not fail to be understood. It is not filled with distorted figures and facts, but tells truths that are driven home by actual proof that is most convincing.

Philipp took up a "White Man's Burden" when he became the conservative republican candidate for governor two years ago and it has proven anything but a light load to shoulder ever since he took office. Seriously handicapped by an adverse state senate, measures that should have become laws were sidetracked and now he is blamed for not accomplishing just what the progressives prevented him from completing.

Governor Philipp is a big man. Those who heard him last night can not fail to be sure of the fact. He is a big man, both mentally and physically. There is no pomp, no over-catchy artifices, no ranting, dramatic action, tearing of hair and waving of arms, in his talk; just good sound common sense.

Janesville had an opportunity of viewing the governor at close range and the impression he made will be lasting in its effect. It is safe to say, no one can come in contact with the man and hear him speak and not feel that what he utters are truths and that he is earnest in labors to give this state a firm business administration if given proper support by the voters.

LAW BEHIND LAWS.

There has been a much discussed as to the rights of a nation to protest against infringements of another nation on its rights as a neutral, and so many relations to the so-called international law, that it is interesting to note the Christian Science Monitor's views on the subject, which are as follows:

"The enforcement of law is not always, or even generally, dependent on material power. In civilized communities a great majority of the laws are self-enforcing and self-operative, or become operative through popular recognition of the justice behind them and of the benefits which observance of them confers on the individual, the group or the mass. Moral restraint is by far the most potent agent in modern government. It requires, in these times and in civilized communities, no written code and no physical expression of authority to prevent the commission of offenses that were common in other days. The better educated, the more highly cultured people become, the less need is there of enforcing them with laws supported by power. Only a small percentage of the people in any advanced nation must be controlled in their action by force. Self-restraint and wholesome regard for the rights and opinions of others, recognition of social and political duties, a refined sense of one's duty toward one's neighbor, an almost universal acceptance of the Golden Rule, are all restraining power and penalization less essential to the preservation of peace and the protection of person and property. All this, of course, presupposes the existence of normal conditions."

"Abnormal conditions are found throughout the greater part of the world today. Over a vast area of the earth might prevails. A large and important section of the world's population is taking little account of any law save the law of force. The influences generated by these conditions stretch far beyond the nations immediately concerned. These influences have crossed the oceans. They are affecting thought in the United States. Hence the desire for emulation. Hence the reasoning that refuses to see any escape from the contagion of war that does not mean the acceptance of the system that so commonly leads to it."

"Nothing would be more futile, of course, than an attempt to prevent war through the operation of international law without providing some means for the law's enforcement. Elihu Root is right in holding to the point that arbitration must be supported if arbitration is to be effective. He is right in the position that in the real restraint of nations by powerful international tribunals, operating under a definite code of laws, alone lies hope of world peace. He is right in holding that laws, to be obeyed, must have behind them power superior to that possessed by the lawbreaker. If the lawbreaker is a nation, it must be subject to arraignment and, if convicted, to punishment as if it were an individual. It is the business of the many among the nations, as it is the business of the many in the community, to see to it that proper laws are made, that they are observed and that their violation will certainly be followed by chastisement.

"But committees are not, and need not be, in a constant state of warfare with the lawless. The mass of the people need not, and do not, pursue their daily vocations under a system of penal laws. There is no more necessity for an armed world, because some nations are lawless, than there would be for an armed nation or an armed city because some people are not law-abiding. There is, we believe, hope for lasting peace, and greatest hope, in the present tendency of thought among a very large section of the thinking population, in the United States and other countries, completely away from physical compulsion, and directly toward the sole employment of moral force in the settlement of international disputes and in the enforcement, especially, of international law. A peace plan based on the idea that nations are just as answerable before decent, law-respecting public opinion as are individuals for their conduct, and fully as amenable to arraignment, reprimand and correction for disregarding this opinion, can, we are convinced, be made to stand, first, because it is founded on reason, and second, because it is founded on experience.

"The man who violates commercial law is soon driven out of business and thereby deprived of the means of inflicting others. The man who violates social law is soon driven out of society. There is no more potent factor in the material world today than credit: stripped of credit even the rich man, the man who may swing his millions in the market or bourse, and on their strength demand attention, is without standing in the commercial world. Morality is power, and morality is the power which must ultimately determine the standing and the future of nations.

"If a group of the great nations of the earth shall unite to put down international lawlessness, and employ moral force only in the process, they are as certain to achieve their end as a group of bankers or merchants would be to drive an immoral trader out of business, or a group of social leaders would be to drive a disreputable character out of society. The force of the latter cause is physical force resorted to now. When the law-abiding nations of the earth unite to discipline the lawless, they will need no other power to back them than that which on occasion gives unstinted approval and support to the cold shoulder of society."

PUBLIC MANNERS.

An elderly man who walks quite feebly, using a cane a good deal of the time, complained to the writer the other day of the heedlessness of the public school children.

"I was going along the street," he said, "when a bunch of them came along four abreast. I was feeling pretty weak and dizzy, but they just forced me into the gutter, and one of them switched his arm, and they knocked my cane out of my hand. Never stopped to pick it up or say 'Excuse me,' either."

It was not long ago that an aged lady spoke of the way she felt she had made herself ridiculous in crossing a street.

"I suppose I got flustered," she admitted, "and probably I made a fool of myself. I just couldn't help it. But I couldn't look all around at once, and when I first saw the automobile it was within about five feet of me. I know I ought to have gone right ahead, but instead of that I lost my wits and drew back, and the machine had to stop sharp, and let me get out of the way. Then I could hear them laughing at me."

Incidents like these must occur to the minds of most people. As far as the children are concerned, the teachers can do something. It is a damage to a boy or a girl to grow up without a sense of reverence for older people. The older can get along without the young people's respect, but the young will suffer a loss if they do not cultivate the friendship of older persons.

Unfortunately this lack of consideration for the older people is not confined to the little ones. There are a great many grown-ups to whom gray hairs mean nothing. The world is a race in which the devil takes the hindmost. If you are handicapped by your failing muscles, that is your misfortune, not my fault.

The true gentleman or lady scarcely ever insists on the full measure of his rights. He would rather lose the best seat in the car or the first place at the ticket window, if he must nudge and elbow and jostle to get it.

ALLEN S. BAKER.

Announcement of the death of Allen S. Baker of Janesville, president of the Baker Manufacturing company, is received with sincere regret throughout the county, where he was born and lived all his life, and whose interests he so carefully safeguarded in the legislative halls. Mr. Baker was a rare man of unusual talents, and a lovable disposition. He obtained the best out of life and gave in return the fullness of his knowledge for the benefit of others. Men and women are better for having come in contact with this kind and interesting man. He left his impression upon all. Upon his work, upon his fellow workers, upon his friends and acquaintances. In his death Rock county loses a valuable citizen, nor is the loss confined to the limits of the county, but the whole state suffers equally. A soldier in the army of the republic in time of need, he continued as a true soldier in the Christian army of usefulness throughout his long and useful life. Mr. Baker has passed to the world beyond, but the good he did will live after him and his memory ever be kept green by those who loved and respected him.

After the Austrian note on the Ancona, our fighting editors had to lock up their rusty horse pistols in the bottom drawer; but now that the Persia has been sunk, they are brandishing them more ferociously than ever. Many towns have an annual cleanup day, but in time that will be regarded as only as satisfactory as the man who takes an annual bath.

MAYOR OF WINNIPEG HAS PLAN TO HELP WOUNDED SOLDIERS

Mayor R. D. Waugh.

The providing of homes for the returned Canadian soldiers is held by Mayor R. D. Waugh of Winnipeg, Manitoba, as the Dominion's most sacred duty to the men who have suffered in the trenches. To this end Mayor Waugh has outlined a plan which contemplates the establishment of these men upon forty-acre farms in what is known as the Winnipeg Water district, an area north of the city comprising thousands of acres, the land being most fertile.

The Daily Novelette

Lost Time.

My lady goes to such extremes. No middle ground for her it seems; Today at lunch I saw her take, A devilish card and angel cake.

(Translated from the French.)
"Yes, oui, bien, I am Monsieur Squilliton, madame," replied the famous head of the famous Squilliton detective system.

"I have heard so much about you that I feel sure you can recover my watch for me," said Madame Ladooop. I missed it yesterday at four in the afternoon and said distinctly to my maid Fleurizze slip it into the pocket of her apron. I strongly suspect her of the theft."

"We have not much to go by, Madame, but we will do our best," said the famous Squilliton. Now will you please fill in this blank with the name of your former husband or husbands, your age, birthplace, and places of residence during the past twenty years, your maiden name, your nickname and favorite vegetables, and a short description of all the accidents and odd happenings that have occurred since the age of eight months."

Madame Ladooop spent an hour and a half doing so, and then Monsieur Squilliton went on. "Now, madame, if you will let me have 400 francs to cover the cost of ascertaining secretly the size of your maid's shoes, her depth of chest, rate of pulse, and so forth, I can guarantee to recover your watch within two months."

"Parbleu!" exclaimed Madame Ladooop. "Pate de foie! Nothing doing! The watch cost me only ten francs at the time I lost it. I found it at the Woodworth Preres." And she flourished a note of the Squilliton studios, muttering, "Non! Chemin de fer! Cafe au lait!"

PROGRESSIVES OPTN PLANS FOR CAMPAIGN AT CHICAGO MEETING

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 11.—Preliminary steps in outlining the progressive program for the fight last election, progressives cited. The progressive party was founded on national issues and its strength is there, party leaders asserted.

Chicago, Denver and Cleveland were bidders for the Bull Moose national convention in June. Predictions were that the convention will be held June 21, one week after the Democratic national convention at St. Louis.

Forty-seven national committeemen were to attend the meeting today. A task for the committeemen was to decide how many delegates from each state would be seated at the national convention, based upon the ratio of Roosevelt's vote in each state in 1912. A difference between the committee today and the impromptu conference that led to the bolt of the R. R. faction from the republican party four years ago, was the probable absence of Roosevelt himself. He was not seen anywhere about early in the day, but Victor L. Murdock of Kansas, George W. Perkins of New York and Governor Johnson of California, were mentioned today as presidential possibilities from the Bull Moose standpoint. A full ticket probably will be put in the national race in every state, it possible.

It was predicted that President Wilson's preparatory policies will not be attacked by the progressive party, but that they probably will adopt a similar policy as one of their platform planks.

NO TAX

This month we will have for delivery, a small amount of Wisconsin State Land and Mortgage Bonds which are exempt from all taxation in Wisconsin including the State Income Tax.

In these bonds are found all the advantages and safety which characterize the best farm loans without the inconvenience which the ordinary farm loan entails.

These bonds are issued under the authority and approval of the Banking Department of the state of Wisconsin, are registrable as to principal. They are legal investments for Savings Banks, Trust Companies, or other financial institutions; also for Trustees, Executors, Administrators, or other custodians of public or private funds.

We offer these five per cent bonds at par and accrued interest in denominations of $100, $500, and $1000.

For all details in regard to these bonds including a synopsis of the law under which the bonds are issued, the application for loan and the appraisal inspector's report, etc., write Investment Department, and ask for Circular 9.

One-Man Jury.
A tailor who was defendant in a case tried in court seemed much cast down when brought up for trial. "What's the trouble?" whispered his counsel, observing his client's distress as he surveyed the juryman. "It looks pretty bad for me," said the defendant, "unless some steps are taken to dismiss that jury and get in a new lot. There ain't a man amongst 'em but what owes me money for clothes."

Somewhat "On the Fence."
"Are you in favor of government ownership?" "Sometimes I am," replied the cautious citizen, "although I'd hate to be in a position where I couldn't express my opinion of the way a railroad was run without seeming disrespectful toward my country."

One of the Gazette's most interesting pages is the want ad page. Read it.

PLUCK WINS PLACE FOR ORPHAN BOY

Judge Fred M. Breen.

Sixteen years ago the probate judge of Wexford county, Michigan, disposed of Fred M. Breen, a ten-year-old boy, whose greatest misfortune had been the death of his parents, leaving him without home or friends. The same youth, now a young man, recently took the oath of office as judge of the same court that just a few years ago sent him to a state institution, he being the youngest probate judge in the United States.

LA FOLLETTE COMING TO ANSWER PHILIPP

ARRANGEMENTS MADE FOR SEN-ATOR TO SPEAK IN JANEV-
VILLE SATURDAY EVENING.

TO SPEAK AT THEATRE

Victor P. Richardson Secures Myers
Theatre for Meeting Place—Expect Big Gathering.

Senator Robert M. La Follette, Wisconsin's senior United States senator, will deliver an address in Janesville at eight o'clock Saturday evening, Jan. 15, at the Myers theatre. Announcement to this effect was made today by Victor P. Richardson, who received a telephone message this morning, authorizing him to make all necessary arrangements.

The senator's appearance in Janesville so soon after Governor Philipp is taken to indicate that he will seek to reply to the governor's refutations of the senator's charges against the present state administration. It is predicted that La Follette is anxious to reply to the first utterances which the senator has made since the senator launched his attack through the state, in the same city in which Philip spoke.

It is a question whether La Follette will draw a large audience in Janesville. Even some of his own friends in Rock county are disappointed in the stand which he has taken in opposing the Philipp administration.

Gov. Philipp and his administration.
It is to be hoped, however, that La Follette may be persuaded to touch upon national issues in his Janesville speech and inaugurate a constructive rather than an entirely destructive program.

Senator La Follette last visited the city in the fall of 1914, shortly before the November election. He had planned to give an address on the street corner in the interests of Mr.
Blaine of Roscoe, the independent candidate for governor for whom he returned from Washington to stump the state, but he was unable to do so because of the illness of his wife.

STOLE WATCH FROM PULPIT IN CHURCH

Rev. Millar Loses Timepiece After Conducting Funeral Service
at Milton Junction.

Who is the meanest thief in the world?

Janesville authorities think it is the type of sneak thief or thieves who took the gold watch of Rev. W. B. Miller, pastor at the Methodist church at Milton Junction. Mr. Miller was in this city this morning attempting to ascertain if the two drug hands who were charged with the theft of the watch, were guilty of "lifting" his watch.

Last Friday, Rev. Miller conducted funeral services at his church. During the service he laid his watch by the altar, and the Holy Bible in the pulpit. Probably Rev. Miller desired to "watch" the watch during the service. But when he closed the scriptures and departed with the funeral procession, he missed his watch.

When a search was made, the time-piece was missing, even the words of the commandment, "Thou shalt not steal," were opened to view but a minute before the watch was found.
The search was made, but no trace was found of the gold watch. Someone had "hooked" it in the church, just before the funeral service.

Reading that two men were in custody here and on hearing that a Junction drug store owner and a physician had received visits from two strangers who desired cocaine, Rev.
Miller went to the county jail this morning and with Turnkey William Worran, questioned George Kemp, who is charged with daytime robbery. No watch was found at either William or Kemp when searched by the police and both deny ever being in Milton Junction.

This is almost worse than the thief who robbed the "pear-box," for he marked one of the officers at the county jail. It was reported two men were seen to enter the Junction church, and the funeral was over and come out a few seconds later.

UNCLE SAM FIGHTS TRAFFIC IN BOOZE AMONG THE INDIANS

Commissioner of Indian Affairs
Reports That Liquor Virtually
Has Been Broken Up.

Washington, Jan. 11.—A dramatic story of the government's fight to stop the sale of liquor to Indians is outlined by Cato Selig, Commissioner of Indian Affairs. So well have the efforts of the Indian service succeeded, he said, that the traffic virtually has been broken up.

Not only has the government cut the sale of liquor to Indians on reservations and elsewhere, but in one instance it has made a fifth of a state dry through enforcement of a sixty-year-old Indian treaty. Older treaties are being studied now to determine if saloons in other territory partly populated by Indians can be closed.

Minnesota is the state in which a vast area was freed of saloons by treaty enforcement. The agreement, revised by the government in 1855, forbade the sale of whiskey and beer to Indians. On October 29 last an order was issued by the Indian Bureau here that the convention was a personal matter between the Indians and the government.

Indian officials determined to enforce the treaty and began, too, the study of similar agreements in other states. On October 29 last an order was issued by the Indian Bureau here that the convention was a personal matter between the Indians and the government.

In other parts of the country, officials charged with enforcement of laws against sale of whiskey to Indians worked through court action. Several officers were killed.

An educational campaign against the use of alcohol, Indian officials declare, did much for the enforcement of laws. A prohibitionist campaign also was an aid. Education of the Indian against drink was undertaken through the schools, where students were interested in essay writing contests.

While investigating treaty arrangements, Indian officials discovered a forgotten law permitting the government to levy a fine on saloons in regions where liquor was sold to Indians. This, officials assert, was one of the most fruitful methods tried. Payments were stopped until the saloons agreed to stop the sale of liquor to Indians.

One Indian official has declared this revoking of the white man's pocket book by cutting off payments was as effective as even, to surprise the Indian service.

Reservation officials in the Southwest have bent their energies towards stamping out the fermentation of Tipalapi, a native Indian liquor made from some kind of grain. The use of Peyote buttons, or dried cactus crowns, for making an intoxicating drink has been checked by a Department of Agriculture order prohibiting their importation. Legislation has been asked to give the Indian Office large powers over traffic in Peyote.

State legislation is declared to have been of material assistance to the Indian Office.

Commissioner Selig concluded his review of efforts to stop the sale of liquor to Indians by saying:

"The sentiment of the people is strongly with our work, regardless of the attitude of the individuals on the question of prohibition as it is understood in white communities."

ENGLISH POLICE DOGS PROVE THEIR VALUE IN TRENCH FIGHTING

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Headquarters First Russian Army, Jan. 11.—English police dogs, of which there are six attached to the Twenty-first Flying Column of the Russian Red Cross, have proved their worth in many instances on Russian battlefields. In one night near the village of Kule (vicinity of Leningrad) these wise animals hunted out in grain fields over which the battle raged and brought relief to forty-nine wounded men.

This dog had been brought from London by authorities of the city of Vermaia for use in tracking down thieves and murderers with which the place was infested. Within a few weeks they enabled the police to round up these criminals. One dog, who still retains his English name "Jack," slightly Russianized, was several times sent to Moscow, Kiev and Odessa to similarly aid the police of those cities.

In times of inactivity of the troops the dogs are frequently used to combat the rats which are a constant plague to the army and navy. During battle even under heavy fire, they search out the wounded by scent and the sanitarians may be certain the man to whom they are led is still alive since the dogs instinctively ignore the dead. Having found a wounded man, the animals will carry his cap or a mitten back to the sanitarian who follows to the spot. Each animal wears a pair of miniature saddle bags in which he carries flasks of brandy.

In the campaign the dog resembles the aide of the Irish terrier. An exhibition of man hunting was given for the benefit of the correspondent of headquarters of the First Siberian Corps. A soldier was directed to hide in a dump of bushes two blocks distant in a field. The sanitarian released the dog and directed him in the general direction of the spot. After making several wide circles, the dog caught the scent and made straight for the hiding place at top speed, returning presently with a glove. The sanitarian took a small package in the saddle pocket and away went the dog on his return journey. The sanitarian appeared to assist the hiding man while the dog looked on with apparent interest.

Avoiding Waste of Time.

"There are two sides to every question," said old Coder to the village here, "but inasmuch as I am not interested in the other side and you would not understand my side, I shall not explain either of them to you."—Kansas City Star.

According to Will Weart, the sage of Philadelphia, Connie Mack predicted that he would have his new White Elephant machine going at a fast clip by the middle of the season of 1916. Weart says Connie has a lot of brilliant youngsters still under cover, whom he obtained last season, but did not show to the fans. There is said to be a brilliant shortstop among the list and one or two pitchers of class to fill the holes which the absence of Plank and Bender created. Mack displayed a mighty good-looking young pitcher in the first game of the season last October. He shut out the Nationals and struck out twelve of them. That chap looked mighty good, and if Mack has a couple more of this calibre of fellows under cover he will soon have the fans forgetting all the other great pitchers who used to wear an Athletic uniform.

There are those who believe that Fielder Jones has enough team spirit ability to make a real winner out of the St. Louis Browns. When he took hold of the Stouffers in 1914 that team was at the bottom of the race and he could not extricate it in the short time he had that season. But the next season Jones had the team right up in the race all the year. He drove the players hard and they displayed more system in their playing than any of their rivals.

The rumor that Harry Sinclair will eventually buy the New York Giants will not do. It seems to be the impression that the Oklahoma millionaire has decided to move President Hays' figures and will go to New York in a day or so and close the deal. If this should come to pass it would mean that Sinclair would strengthen McGraw's team with the Fed stars that he will control, and

MIKE I LEFT THE GAS BURNING IN THE CELLAR. I WISH YOU'D GO AROUND PUT IT OUT!

AND HE DID.

NEWS NOTES from MOVIELAND

67 DAISY DEAN

After a dashing courtship of less than a week, Crane Wilbur, now appearing as a star in Los Angeles, was recently married to Miss Arlene Archibald, a beautiful society girl popular in San Francisco and Los Angeles social circles.

As the love story goes, the actor met the society maid in San Francisco some time ago and they became fast friends. They drifted apart, however, until by chance they met at a Los Angeles hotel, the rendezvous of many lovers. A few days before the wedding, Jan Cupid became busy and the sparks of love flew around the mezzanine floor and into the happy pair had wandered in forgetfulness of most everything. Difficulties which had formerly confronted the star were surmounted—the question was asked—a quick trip was made to the courthouse where a license was secured and soon they were wedded. Telegrams were sent to the bride's mother in San Francisco and parental blessings followed.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur are now at home in a cozy love nest in a fashionable neighborhood of Los Angeles, where they are receiving friends and congratulations.

CARROLL MCCOMAS JOINS THE MOVIES

Carroll Comas, for the last four years a Frohman star, has finally ended the movies. At Rainbows' End is the title of a five-part drama soon to be released and in which she makes her debut to screen patrons. "At Rainbows' End" is the tale of a selfish kingdom, a prince and a princess who objected to a royal marriage, a trip off to America on the part of the only girl in a Fifth avenue mansion.

Bibbie Cooke, the dainty blonde leading woman finally has been separated from the society roles she has played so long. In "Their Last Performance," a story of stage life, its lure and temptations she has been seen as a girl who sacrifices herself.

Lovers of the drama will be interested to know that Constance Collier, the well known English actress, will make her screen debut in "The Tongues of Men," adapted from her former stage success.

HAZEL DAWN CHARMS APOLLO AUDIENCES

Fascinating Star Seen to Advantage

In "The Masqueraders," Hazel Dawn was at her best in picture plays in "The Masqueraders," which was presented at the Apollo yesterday, and in which she appeared in the role of the irresistible Dulcie Jaroudie, whom financial straits force, by becoming the barmaid of the stage inn.

Dulcie is a role which gives Miss Dawn a wonderful opportunity to display her talents, not only in the portrayal of the bewitching young girl of the early part of the story, but in the dramatic and pathetic scenes which follow her unhappy marriage to Sir Brice. Always charming, Miss Dawn was especially so in this picture and the producers gave her scenic and photographic beauty as a fitting background.

BADGER FACULTY VOTES FOR VARSITY BASEBALL

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Jan. 11.—Wisconsin faculty members voted for the retention of intercollegiate baseball at Wisconsin in meeting today. When the question was presented there was an evidence of opposition, but the probable faculty members had no difficulty in keeping the sport alive. As a result Wisconsin's Big Nine representative will cast the Badger school a ballot for baseball.

Contrary to expectation the question of abolishing intercollegiate athletics in general did not come up. While it has been known for some time that certain faculty members have been considering the advisability of abolishing athletics and concentrating on a system of intramural contests, there was not a sufficiently developed agitation to warrant action.

thus put McGraw in a position where he would have a chance to win a pennant.

AT THE APOLLO.

Clara Kimball Young Tonight. "Trilby," pictured in five acts of startling and superb photodrama, from the internationally famous book and play by Maurice Maeterlinck, under the direction of the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, with the queenly Clara Kimball Young and Wilton Lackaye.

Lackaye, the distinguished dramatic actor in the stellar roles, comes to the Apollo tonight, and although the most popular story of the day since the year of its publication, the story follows in brief:

Trilby, a model for an obscure sculptor, seeing adventure, meets little Billie, the Lord, Svergal, Ghecko, and others. Svergal experiments with Trilby and proves that he can hypnotize her. His devilish mind conceives the idea of making her under his mesmeric power and giving her, through his power, the voice of a nightingale.

Billie and Trilby fall in love with each other, and when Svergal finally influences Trilby away, and through his hellish power makes her a great diva, Billie is unconsoled.

Trilby mounts the ladder of fame, and soon becomes a universal figure. Billie and his friends happen into a theatre one night, where a fashionable audience has gathered to hear the famous La Sylphide, as Trilby has become known. Discovering Trilby, she attacks Svergal, who dies of heart failure, and Trilby, after months of torture, recovers her own personality and is about to become happy, when, facing Svergal's picture, the old influence returns and she drops dead of fright.

Others prominent in the cast are Paul McAllister and Chester Barnett.

AT THE APOLLO.

Marguerite Clark in "Still Waters." Marguerite Clark, the dainty little actress who has won the hearts of the motion picture public by her marvelous artistry and her prepossessing vivacity in recent productions of the Famous Players-Lasker company, is being starred by the Apollo in "Still Waters," a story of the circus and of canal-boat life, written especially for Miss Clark by Edith Barnard Deane. This rare combination of comedy and drama is the Paramount attraction at the Apollo tomorrow.

"Still Waters" gives Miss Clark the best opportunity which she has had thus far for the display of her versatility.

An entire circus was leased for the purpose of taking the scenes, which occur in and about the big canvas. Harry Lee, one of the New York Hippodrome's most celebrated clowns, was engaged for these scenes, in which his comic antics form a pleasant contrast to the gripping drama in which Miss Clark, as Neeta, plays so tragic a part. Others who appear in support of the diminutive star are Robert Broderick, Robert Vaughn, Arthur Evers and others—especially Sally Ann—but you will never appreciate Sally until you see her.

Children's Matinee. A special children's matinee will be given at 4:15 o'clock for the school children.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG

appearing in "The Heart of the Blue Ridge" at the Majestic, tonight and tomorrow. This picture which was taken amid beautiful mountain scenes gives Miss Young a very adequate setting for her portrayal in this romance of the Virginia mountains.

AT THE PRINCESS.

King Baggot Tonight. The ever popular King Baggot will be seen at the Princess tonight in a feature photoplay "The Law of Life," a picture well fitted to his ability.

Double Feature Tomorrow. Two three reel features will be shown tomorrow in "An Aerial Revenger" and "The Law of Life." The Alpine settings are a delight to the eye and its beauty will linger long in the mind. The climax is a fight in the air between two aeroplanes in which one is destroyed. A great earthquake scene is "The Opera Singer's Revenger."

J. Warren Kerrigan on Thursday. J. Warren Kerrigan will be seen in a special feature, "A Kentucky Idol" on Thursday.

The Lone Wolf

By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

(Copyright, by Louis Joseph Vance.)

"My friend, the chief of the surete, Northwith commissioned his agents to seek such a one, and by this means several fine fish were enmeshed in the net of suspicion, carefully scrutinized, and one by one let go—all except one, the veritable man. Him they sedulously watched, shadowing him across Europe and back again. He was in Berlin at the time of the famous Rheinhardt robbery, though he compassed that coup without detection; he was in Vienna when the British embassy there was looted, but escaped by a clever ruse and managed to dispose of his plunder before the agents of the surete could lay hands on him; recently he has been in London, and there he made love to and ran away with the diamonds of a certain lady of some eminence. You have heard of Mme. Omber, eh?"

Now by Roddy's expression it was plain that if Mme. Omber's name wasn't strange in his hearing, at least he found this news about her most surprising. He was staring openly, with a slackened jaw and stupefaction in his blank, blue eyes.

Lanyard gently pinched the small end of a cigar, dipped it into his demitasse, and lighted it with not so much as a suspicion of tremor. His brain, however, was working rapidly in the effort to determine whether De Morbihan meant this for a warning or was simply narrating an amusing yarn founded on advance information and amplified by an ingenious imagination. For by now the news of the Omber affair must have thrilled many a continental telegraph wire.

"Mme. Omber—of course!" the American agreed thoughtfully. "Everyone has heard of her wonderful diamonds. The real marvel is that the Lone Wolf neglected so shining a mark as long as he did."

"But truly so, monsieur!" "And they caught him at it, eh?" "Not precisely; but he left a clue—and London as well—with such haste and would seem to indicate he knew his cunning hand had for once slipped."

"Then they'll nab him soon?" "Ah, monsieur, one must say no more!" De Morbihan protested. "Rest assured that the chief of the surete has laid his plans—his web is spun, and so artfully that I think our unsociable outlaw will soon be making at Troyon's as well as dined there. And the adventurer found time to reflect that it was odd for such a one to seek that particular establishment in preference to the palatial modern hostilities of the Rive Droite—before De Morbihan, ostensibly for the first time spying Lanyard, plunged across the room with both hands outstretched and a cry of joyous surprise not really justified by their rather slight acquaintanceship.

"Ah! Ah!" he clamored vivaciously. "It is M. Lanyard, who knows all about paintings! But this is delightful—a grand pleasure! You must know my friends. But come!"

And seizing Lanyard's hands, when that one somewhat reluctantly rose in response to this surprisingly over-enthusiastic greeting, he dragged him willy-nilly from behind his table.

"And you are American, too. Certainly you must know one another. Mlle. Bannon—with your permission—my friend, M. Lanyard. And M. Bannon—an old, dear friend, with whom you will share a passion for the beauties of art."

The hand of the American, when Lanyard clasped it, was cold, as cold as ice; and as their eyes met that abominable cough laid hold of the man, as it were by the nape of his neck, and shook him viciously. Before it had finished with him his sensitively colored face was purple and he was gasping, breathless—and infuriated.

"M. Bannon," De Morbihan explained disconnectedly—"It is most distressing—I tell him he should not stop in Paris at this season."

"It is nothing!" the American interposed brusquely between paroxysms. "But our winter climate monstrosity—it is not fit for those in the prime of health."

"It is I who am unfit!" Bannon snapped, pressing a handkerchief to his lips—"unfit to live!" he amended venomously.

Lanyard murmured a conventional expression of sympathy. Through it all he was conscious of the regard of the girl. Her soft, brown eyes met his candidly, with a look cool in its composure, straightforward in its inquiry, neither bold nor mock-demure. And if they were the first to fall, it was with an effect of curiosity staid, without trace of discomfort. And somehow the adventurer felt himself measured, classified, filed away.

Between amusement and pique he continued to stare, while the elderly American recovered his breath and De Morbihan jabbered on with unflagging vivacity; and he thought that this closer scrutiny discovered in her face contours suggesting a maturity of thought beyond her apparent years—which were somewhat less than the sum of his own—and with this the suggestion of an elusive, provoking quality of wistful languor, a hint of patient melancholy.

"We are off for a glimpse of Montmartre," De Morbihan was explaining—"M. Bannon and I. He has not seen Paris in twenty years, he tells me. Well, it will be amusing to show him what changes have taken place in all that time. One regrets mademoiselle is too fatigued to accompany us. But you, my friend—now if you would consent to make our third, it would be most amiable of you."

"I'm sorry," Lanyard excused himself; "but, as you see, I am only just from the railroad, a long and tiresome journey. You are very good, but mean? How much did he know? If he knew anything, he must mean ill, for assuredly he could not be ignorant of Roddy's business or that every other word he uttered was riveting suspicion of identity with the Lone Wolf or that Roddy was listening with all his ears and staring into the bargain!

Decidedly something must be done to silence this animal, De Morbihan, should it turn out he really did know something!

It was only after profound reflection over his hiqueur—while Roddy devoured his Daily Mail and washed it down with a third bottle of Bass—that Lanyard summoned the maitre d'hotel and asked for a room.

It would never do to fix the doubts of the detective by going elsewhere that night. But, fortunately, Lanyard knew that warren which was Troyon's as no one else knew it. Roddy would send it hard to detain him should events seem to advise an early departure.

CHAPTER IV.

A Stratagem.

When the maitre d'hotel had shown him all over the establishment—innocently enough, en route, furnishing him with a complete list of his other guests and their rooms, memoranda readily registered by a retentive memory—Lanyard chose the bedchamber next that occupied by Roddy, in the second story.

The consideration influencing this selection was, of course, that so situated he would be in a position not only to keep an eye on the man from Scotland Yard, but also to determine whether or not Roddy were disposed to keep an eye on him.

In those days Lanyard's faith in himself was a beautiful thing. He could not have enjoyed the immunity ascribed to the Lone Wolf so long as he had without gaining a power of sturdy self-confidence in addition to a certain degree of temperate contempt for the spies of the law and all their ways.

Reviewing the scene in the restaurant, Lanyard felt measurably warranted in assuming not only that Roddy was interested in De Morbihan, but that the Frenchman was well aware of that interest. And he resented sincerely his inability to feel as confident that the count, with his gossip about the Lone Wolf, had been merely seeking to divert Roddy's interest to putatively larger game. It was just possible that De Morbihan's identification of Lanyard with that mysterious personage, at least by innuendo, had been unintentional. But somehow Lanyard didn't believe it.

However, one would surely learn something illuminating before very long. The business of a sleuth is to slouch, and sooner or later Roddy must surely make some move to indicate the quarter wherein his real interest lay.

Just at present, reasoning from noises audible through the bolted door that communicated with the adjoining bedchamber, the business of a sleuth seemed to comprise going to bed.

Lanyard, shaving and dressing, could distinctly hear a tuneless voice contentedly humming "Sally in Our Alley," a rendition punctuated by one heavy thump, and then another, and then by a heartfelt sigh of relief—as Roddy kicked off his boots—and followed by the tapping of a pipe against grate-bars, the complaint of a window being lowered for ventilation, the click of an electric-light switch, and the creaking of bed springs.

Finally, and before Lanyard had finished dressing, the man from Scotland Yard began placidly to snore.

Of course, he might well be bluffing, for Lanyard had taken pains to let Roddy know that they were room neighbors by announcing his selection in loud tones close to the communicating door.

But this was a question which the adventurer meant to have answered before he went out.

It was hard upon twelve o'clock when the mirror on the dressing table assured him that he was at length in the habit and apparel of a gentleman of elegant nocturnal leisure. But if he approved the figure he cut, it was mainly because clothes interested him and he reckoned his own impeccability. Of their tenant he was feeling just then a bit less sure than he had half an hour since; his regard was lowering and mistrustful.

He was, in short, suffering reaction from the high spirits engendered by his cross-channel exploits, his successful getaway, and the unusual circumstances attendant upon his return to this memory-haunted museum of an unhappy childhood. He even shivered a trifle, as if under premonition of misfortune.

With one last look round to make certain there was nothing in his room's calculated disorder to incriminate him were it to be searched in his absence, Lanyard enveloped himself in a long, full-skirted coat, clapped on an opera hat, and went out, noisily locking the door. He might as well have left it wide; but it would do no harm to pretend he didn't know the bedchamber keys at Troyon's were interchangeable—identically the same keys, in fact, that had been in service in the time of Marcel the wretched.

A single half-power electric bulb now modified the gloom of the hallway; its fellow made a light blot on the darkness of the courtyard. Even the windows of the conciergerie were black.

None the less Lanyard tapped them smartly.

"Cordon!" he demanded in a strident voice—"Cordon, s'il vous plait!" "Eh?" A startled grunt from within the lodge was barely audible. Then the latch clicked loudly at the end of the passageway.

Groping his way in the direction of this last sound, Lanyard found the small side door ajar. He opened it and hesitated a moment, looking out as though questioning the weather; simultaneously his deft fingers wedged the latch back with a thin slip of steel.

It had, in fact, not been raining within an hour, but still the sky was dense with a low, sullen wrack of cloud, and still the sidewalks were filthy-wet.

The street was lonely and indifferently lighted, but a swift, searching reconnaissance discovered no spy skulking in the shelter of any of the nearer shadows.

Dinner Stories

Miss Curley kept a private school, and one morning was interviewing a new pupil.

"What does your father do to earn his living?" the teacher asked the little girl.

"Please, ma'am," was the prompt reply, "he doesn't live with us. My mamma supports me."

"Well, then," asked the teacher, "how does your mother earn her living?"

"Why, replied the little girl in an artless manner, "she gets paid for staying away from father."

There are a lot of four-flushers who go through life without learning that four-flushing is a fine art. Such are beneath contempt. But one has great admiration for those few who have mastered the game.

"If a man called me a liar," asserted one of such, "I'd sail in and lick him if he weighed 300 pounds."

"Well, you big blun," answered one who was tired of listening, "I call you, right here and now. You're a liar."

"Blunt yourself," came back the artist, without a minute's hesitation. "You don't weigh more than 150, and you know what I said."

An Englishman who stopped overnight at a western American hotel noticed that instead of ringing a bell at meal time the proprietor went to the front door and fired a double-barreled shotgun. Later in the evening the Englishman commented on this strange procedure.

"That's a novel idea of yours," he remarked to the proprietor, "calling your guests by firing a gun."

"Yes," drawled the proprietor, "it generally fetches 'em around in time to say grace."

"Yes," admitted the Englishman. "But pardon the question, why do you discharge only one barrel?"

"Wouldn't do to shoot 'em both," answered the proprietor. "Have to keep 'em both to collect pay for meals and lodging!"

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Daily Gazette, Jan. 11, 1876.—The county board of supervisors met at two o'clock this afternoon.

The indications are fair that we will have plenty of ice for next summer.

The circuit court is still contending with the windmill case from Beloit.

Several others, all members of the third house, went to Madison this afternoon to attend the opening of the legislature.

Washington, Jan. 11.—John Wilson, former commissioner of the general land office and third auditor of the treasury, died today, aged 66.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—The body of a laborer named John White was found in a vat at the stock yards this morning.

He was hauling offal to the vats last night and it is supposed that he fell into the boiling blood. His flesh was almost entirely boiled from the bones at the time of the discovery of the body.

Animal Window Cards or Magic Lantern Pictures

Mr. Rooster

Copy this drawing much larger on a piece of drawing paper. Paste the drawing on a piece of cardboard or strong paper. When thoroughly dry and smooth, cut away all the black parts with a sharp pen-knife or embroidery scissors. Be very careful when cutting that you do not break any of the white pieces which connect the different parts.

After you have cut away the black pieces, paste narrow strips of colored tissue paper back of the openings as follows:

Red paper back of his comb and below his bill; yellow paper for his eye, bill and legs; and dark green paper for the general outline. Place in front of the light.

Look for the new animal next week.

INTERMENT COLONY HAVE "EASY" TIME AT BRITISH CAMP

Correspondent Tells of Conditions at Camp—Prisoners Thoroughly Enjoy Life.

London, Jan. 2.—(By Mail.)—Alexandra Palace, England's largest single interment camp for civilian prisoners of war, corresponding to Germany's Ruhleben, near Berlin, is the peculiarly interesting British Military City. More than 2,000 enemy aliens, rich and poor from all parts of the world, are living at Alexandra Palace, north London. Hundreds of Croats and Poles from Pittsburgh and Detroit, captured on their way home to fight, well known musical artists, interned while performing in England; German and Austrians taken from ships in the Atlantic and the North Sea and Austro-German directors of big British firms, together with alien inhabitants of England, some of thirty years' residence, make a unique and remarkable colony—for the duration of the war.

There is no social distinction in the camp. Military discipline prevails. It effects the Englishman aristocrat and the lowest Pittsburgh steel worker alike. A company of British soldiers, known as the "British Battalion," time served as a London Convey Island, or White City.

Complete Camp. There are complete societies, of poets, novelists, painters, sculptors, a theater that would do credit to Broadway, work shops for dozens of trades, a fully equipped hospital, schools, first aid, football and Swedish drill, laundry, bathhouse, post office, stores, restaurants, ballroom and dozens of other things inside the barbed wire enclosing this multitude.

"They are making the best of it and it is my duty to let them enjoy life to the limit of military possibilities," remarks Colonel Paul von Scharf, a British regular army veteran of twenty years in the Orient, who is the commandant.

The commandant's words voice the British attitude toward prisoners of war, both military and civilian. It considers the human side of those forced to live behind wire entanglements. Once a week the commandant turns over his office to prisoners who have complaints. He hears the stories and does what he can. The man with a cough tells his troubles to the captain of his mess. If it is infectious, the complaint is passed to the alien commandant who governs a hundred men. He takes it up with the battalion commandant, another alien, who governs a thousand men. Then the complaint may appear in person before the commandant, who never "strifes" the enemy.

Twice weekly the commandant personally inspects every one of the 2,000 beds located under the great roofs of the palace. These beds are neat and clean, with four blankets and a soft mattress for each.

Preparation of Food. There are eight cooks for every thousand prisoners. The food is prepared and taken to the three great mess rooms, each of which can compare in floor space to the main hall of New York's Grand Central station. Here is the food prepared, for many days. One and one-half pounds of white bread, cooked pound of meat, one-half pound of potatoes, two ounces of butter, half a pound of rice, two ounces of sugar, one-half ounce of tea, half an ounce of coffee, one ounce of jam, half an ounce of fruit, half an ounce of milk, half an ounce of butter, half an ounce of sugar, half an ounce of tea, half an ounce of coffee, one ounce of jam, half an ounce of fruit, half an ounce of milk, half an ounce of butter.

Each prisoner has a large canteen where a prisoner may obtain his food in bulk. The canteen is freely patronized by the captives, but the ordinary fare is better than the average Pittsburgh steel worker ever had in his life. These Pittsburghers aren't anxious for the war to close. They're satisfied.

The American embassy, God-father of all enemy aliens in the British Isles, works hard in hand with a special committee of the war office to get to care for the special wants of the camp. The women and children in the camp are the principal beneficiaries of the war office's beneficence. More than 2,000 women have been interned since September. Among every prisoner's books for reading is a copy of the weekly "The Prisoner of War," which is the only paper published in the camp. The paper will read 1,000 persons. The scenery was painted by artists who rank high in British and German art circles and is infinitely better than that to be seen in the average London playhouse.

Musicals Held. A smaller hall, for 500 persons, is set aside for the evening musicals. This hall is always crowded. At tonight's concert Herr P. Lomant, an Austrian violinist, who will be heard in America after the war, was the star attraction. His program, much applauded, was: Toulou's Tittle, by Toulou; Nocturne, Chopin-Sarasati; Zephyr, Hubay; Ballad and Polonaise, Vieuxtemps. An overgrown wreath was presented to Lomant by his admirers, the commandant doing the honors. Herr Lino Vesco, a Hungarian grand opera singer, helped by A. Roschovsky, who studied under Paderewski, also was vociferously received.

Wonderful rose gardens surrounding the palace are kept by the aliens. In these gardens the married men receive visits from their wives or friends once a month, for fifteen minutes.

Special dispensation is granted to interned business men. Today a meeting of the directors of a big British company, both British and German members attending, was held in a room provided for the purpose. A British officer was listening. One of the German directors has lived in England for twenty years. He owns a mansion in London, a summer home at Margate, and has ten servants and an income that runs into six figures. On Sunday there are church services for all creeds, Catholics, Lutherans, Jews, etc. The latter for the scores of informed Polish and German Jews. Prisoners may write two letters each week. They smoke when they want to and do what they want to and there is no grumbling.

NOVEL FREAKS OF LIGHTNING

Common Trick Is That of Undressing
Its Human Victims—Few Queer Instances Cited.

The antics played by lightning are sometimes almost beyond belief. A common trick is that of undressing its victims. In 1898 two girls and an elderly woman were standing by a reaping machine during a storm. A lightning flash struck the woman and killed her on the spot, while the two girls were stripped to the skin, even their boots being torn from their feet. Otherwise they were safe and sound, but astonished.

In 1855 a man was struck by lightning near Valloires, in France, and stripped naked. All that could be found afterward of his clothes was a shirt sleeve, a few other shreds and some pieces of his hob nailed boots. Ten minutes after he was struck he regained consciousness, opened his eyes, complained of the cold and inquired how he happened to be naked. Such instances have been recorded again and again. In one case a man and two oxen were struck simultaneously, and all three killed. The man was found stripped to the skin and his boots had been carried thirty yards away.

"In other cases," says Camille Flammarion, the eminent French astronomer, "lightning has been known to split men in half, almost as with a huge ax. On June 20, 1858, this happened to a miller's assistant at a windmill near Croix. The lightning struck him and split him from his head downward in two."

Eat Plenty of Fruit.

For its appetizing values fruit should be eaten before meals. If taken as a dessert at the end of the meal fruit has its best effect from the nutritive standpoint. For its laxative properties fruit should be taken on an empty stomach, preferably soon after rising in the morning.

Why Harsh Words Hurt.

Most people seem to feel hard words more than hard deeds, and are more upset by insults than by actual injuries. What we do to an enemy in war is done from necessity, but the evil we say of him seems to arise from an excess of spite.—Plutarch.

MILWAUKEE MEDICAL MEN TO URGE LAW TO REPORT LA GRIPPE CASES

Milwaukee, Jan. 11.—A law requiring householders to report cases of lagrippe and colds will be urged at the next biennial meeting of the Wisconsin Medical society, as a result of the widespread grippe epidemic of this winter, by Dr. G. C. Ruhland, health commissioner of this city. Dr. Ruhland said that although the epidemic is the worst ever experienced in Milwaukee, the health department has no way of keeping track of the disease. Read the want ads.

Grateful Hobo.

The subject of gratitude was being discussed, and Congressman Samuel E. Winslow of Massachusetts told of an incident that happened in New England.

A weary-looking hobo begged for something to eat at the back door of a suburban home, and was given a whole mince pie. In less than two hours he was back on the same doorstep.

"Lady," said he, when the good housewife answered the timid knock, "would you be kind enough to give me the recipe for that mince pie what you handed me this morning?"

"For mercy's sake, man!" exclaimed the astonished housewife. "What do you want that recipe for?"

"To settle a bet, lady," answered the hobo. "My partner says you use three cupsful of cement to one of molasses, and I claim you use only two and a half."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Daily Thought.

As ships meet at sea, a moment together, when words of greeting must be spoken, and then away into the deep, so men meet in this world; and I think we should cross no man's path without hailing him, and, if he needs, giving him supplies.—Henry Ward Beecher.

TODAY'S BEAU Y HINT

It is not necessary to shampoo hair so frequently if your hair is properly cleansed each time by use of a really good shampoo. The easiest to use and quickest drying shampoo that can be recommended to our readers may be prepared very cheaply by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthox in a cup of water. This rubbed into the scalp creates a thick lather, soothing and cooling in its action, as well as being beneficial to scalp and hair. After rinsing, the scalp is fresh and clean, while the hair dries quickly and evenly, developing a bright luster and a soft fluffiness that makes it seem very heavy. Advertisement.

GABY'S PET CHIHUAHUA WEARS PEARL EARRINGS TO MATCH $200,000 NECKLACE

Gaby Deslys and her Chihuahua dog wearing pearl earrings.

Babe, the tiny Mexican Chihuahua dog, which is shown here with its mistress Gaby Deslys has the unique distinction of being the first dog to wear earrings. These earrings were made of pearl to match Gaby's famous $200,000 pearl necklace given to her by ex-King Manuel of Portugal. The picture shows Miss Deslys wearing the famous pearls about her neck and the dog with the pearls in its ears.
